BRIAND'S SPEECH HELD EXCELLENT POLITICAL MOVE

DEFENSE OF BIG ARMY IS ANSWER TO CRITICS. AID TO PREMIER

Subject of Land Forces May be Left to League, Feeling of Observers.

By DAVID LAWRENCE. Copyright 1921, by Janesville Gazette.

Continental Hall, Washington, D. C.—Premier Briand primarily addressed the people of France Monday and also continental Europe as he defended the military policy of France which, three years after the armistice, maintains the largest standing army in the world.

Only those who have followed the intricacies of French politics and know the maneuvers of the opposition in the French parliament which are seeking to overthrow the Briand ministry for not being even more vigorous in handling Germany can understand the true significance of the French premier's speech.

Secretary Hughes, with characteristic directness, referred to land armaments in a seemingly general way but managed to emphasize nevertheless, without making invidious comparisons, the first of the United States which, at the time of the armistice, had an army of 4,200,000 men under arms, now has reduced the regular army to 160,000 men.

Defends French Policy. As he realized that Mr. Hughes had challenged France's reasons for a large military establishment and that the whole world has been pointing an inquiring finger at France for some time because of the side of her army, Premier Briand took occasion to deny that the design of France was militaristic. He made the stock argument which has been heard for years from French public officials and writers for the last three years, namely, that Germany had not given evidence of good faith and would not be trusted to pay her bill to France.

The whole speech was a defense of the French idea that at any moment an unexpected aggression might develop on the German border. Mr. Briand went somewhat further than usual in drawing a distinction between the working classes of Germany, which he thought were sincerely desirous of peace and the big business and military elements like Ludendorff who, he thought, were still unconquered by spirit and were thinking about a next war.

On German Reaction. To the suggestions that Germany was being disarmed, the French premier cited only the record of Germany haggling first over terms and later over the indemnity settlements as justification for French precaution. His whole philosophy was that of continental Europe which places entire confidence on physical forces and influence in international behavior. Again and again Premier Briand insisted that it was the existence of a large French standing army alone which made Germany obey today. Security against a future invasion as well as the possession of a means of averting Germany to pay points and he were Mr. Briand's big points and he walked around and around them. Originally, it was the French position (Continued on page 8)

"Big Five" at Arms Conference Are Snapped in Cheerful Mood

The smiles that wreath the faces of four of the chairmen of the five leading delegations at the arms conference appear well for its success.

It is significant that the only delegate in the group who does not smile is Prince Tokugawa, head of the Japanese delegation. In refusing to take part in the general good will expressed by the others is he reflecting Japan's attitude?

"WILLETTA FAKE," SAYS PSYCHOLOGY PROF. AT MADISON

HAS NO MARVELOUS ABILITY, ASSERTS JASTROW.

NOT BLIND, CLAIM Challenges Tests Made to Show Extraordinary Powers of Sense.

Madison—Dr. Joseph Jastrow, head of the psychology department of the University of Wisconsin, in a statement Tuesday declared that Willetta Huggins, Janesville girl, who claims to be able to see small colors and to hear by the sense of touch, has no such sense powers.

Tests made at the University of Wisconsin psychology laboratory prove the young girl is neither totally deaf or totally blind, he says. "I have no hesitation in saying that the tests, so far as they went, gave not the slightest indication of a possession by this girl of any unusual sense," he said, "and that, on the contrary, indications are perfectly clear that she gets a knowledge of color through such portion of vision as remains to her."

No Mystery, Claim. "The same is true of hearing by vibration and for the present I content myself with the statement that there is no miracle involved and indeed no mystery whatever."

Articles have been written about the girl as a so-called Helen Keller, in nationally circulated magazines and newspapers.

Since the first publication of the story of Willetta Huggins and her marvelous hearing though deaf and her seeing though blind, there have been numerous articles written of her uncanny demonstrations. The Crissey to Janesville and he gave her much space after the most rigid examination. Scores of men and women have seen her, examined her with microscopic scrutiny and all that has been done, and the little blind girl from Chippewa Falls has stood the test.

Tested in Dark Room. Superintendent J. H. Cooper, of the State School for the Blind in the city but will answer Dr. Jastrow when he returns.

In a darkened room, looked also in a vault, the color test has been performed by the girl. The controversy is likely to arise over the statements of Jastrow will result in such tests that will establish for all time the truth of the demonstrations of the trained power of the child, Willetta.

Hear's Radio Phone. The most phenomenal performance of the 16 year old blind pupil, according to Superintendent J. H. Cooper, was when the girl placed her fingers against the plate of the receiver of a telephone and interpreted distinctly the messages sent by wireless telephones from the University of Wisconsin. No one, so far as known, has ever exhibited such uncanny powers.

Mr. Hooper recently predicted that the girl's marvelous powers would bring scientists from all over the world to Janesville to see for themselves which no other person has ever done.

Los Angeles—The trial of Arthur C. Burch, indicted on charges of the murder of J. Belton Kennedy, began Tuesday in the superior court after a motion to try Mrs. Madeline Burch as co-defendant, had been denied. Burch, a jury started at once. "Only Living Fiancee," on Stand, Defends French Bluebeard; Tells Love

VERSAILLES.—Immense crowds, calling to mind the Versailles of the most famous days of the peace conference, assembled on Tuesday morning in the hope of hearing the testimony of Fernande Segre, "bluebeard" Landru's eleven alleged fiancee and the only one, according to the prosecution, to escape death at his hands. Landru is facing the charge of having murdered ten women and the son of one of them.

Mlle. Segre, staunchly stood by her former lover, telling the judge and jury a story of simple love and delicate attentions bestowed upon her by the much abused of strange cutting them to bits and crumpling ten other women.

The small stove in which the prosecution contends Landru incinerated his alleged victims, was produced in court Tuesday. The stove was examined by the jury with most minute attention.

The prisoner's physical condition is beginning to improve under the strain of the trial. He is so feeble that he had to be helped to walk across the small courtyard surrounding the jail of the courthouse.

After 45 minutes of testimony, Mlle. Segre fainted on the stand and court adjourned. Landru showed emotion for the first time, while Tuesday's witnesses recalled their relations.

The defense Tuesday announced the plea of Landru's insanity had been abandoned.

PENROSE, HEFLIN HURL HOT WORDS IN UPPER HOUSE

DISTURBANCE DURING SPEECH STARTS RUMOR. WORDS EXPUNGED

States of Respective Senators Come in for Picturesque Names.

Washington—Disorder marked the beginning Tuesday of senate consideration of the conference report on the tax bill, the climax being reached in the unusual procedure of expunging senatorial remarks from the record.

The words stricken out were contained in a verbal clash between Senators Penrose, republican, Pennsylvania and Hefflin, democrat, Alabama, in which Mr. Penrose referred to the "black darkness of the state," repeated by Mr. Hefflin and the Alabama senator characterized Mr. Penrose's state as "manipulated by predatory interests."

Exchange "Complications." The clash was precipitated directly by conversations among senators which Mr. Penrose claimed disturbed him in a speech on the Ford-Navy-Senatorial contest. He asked for order. Senator Penrose had declined to permit Mr. Hefflin to have the floor. "I am not surprised," Mr. Hefflin said, "at the remark of the senator of Pennsylvania. He is known as the big boss of Pennsylvania and that no senator can come here from that state unless he is a member of the club."

There was a demand for order. Mr. Penrose said he had no desire to interrupt Mr. Hefflin, "knowing the black darkness he represented in his state," Mr. Penrose had called upon him in a speech on the Ford-Navy-Senatorial contest. He asked for order. Senator Penrose had declined to permit Mr. Hefflin to have the floor. "I am not surprised," Mr. Hefflin said, "at the remark of the senator of Pennsylvania. He is known as the big boss of Pennsylvania and that no senator can come here from that state unless he is a member of the club."

When order was restored Senator Penrose, republican, Wisconsin, made the motion to expunge the remarks. Senator Penrose, republican, Washington, argued it was useless to expunge, since every one in the senate knew they had been said, and that they would be printed in the newspapers.

The motion, however, was adopted. When order was restored Senator Penrose, republican, Wisconsin, made the motion to expunge the remarks. Senator Penrose, republican, Washington, argued it was useless to expunge, since every one in the senate knew they had been said, and that they would be printed in the newspapers.

There were differences of opinion, the chair ruling that Mr. Penrose had the floor from which Mr. Hefflin promptly appealed, only to have the ruling sustained. The tax bill was brought in then without difficulty, but Mr. Hefflin was first up after that action and renewed his attack on Senator Penrose, whose state is contested by Henry Ford.

Madison—A conference of representatives of Wisconsin farmers to consider problems directly affecting agricultural interests with a view to laying plans for a possible new organization, will be held here Friday, Nov. 25, on call of Judge A. Judge Lenz says that no definite plan will be laid before the farmers present, but they will be asked to suggest means for uniting agricultural forces of the state to promote the real farm interests. Under present conditions he believes that agriculture is called on to bear the greatest burden of depression, and to have the most effective organization for bettering its condition, and promoting its welfare.

Vote to Change Type of Roads

Monroe—The Green county board, by a roll call vote, again Monday afternoon lined up in favor of changing the type of construction of bond issue highway from the material accepted by the voters in the referendum in 1919. Five supervisors voted against the resolution.

L. J. Stahl, supervisor of Brookfield, denounced the resolution as a breach of faith with the people of the county who, at a carefully considered referendum, had adopted a program calling for the construction of 180 miles of concrete roads. The voters authorized a $3,000,000 bond issue. Oiling of roads has been suggested instead of surfacing with concrete as was provided in the referendum.

Other members of the board believe that if the costs are too high, as was argued, the best policy is to slow up the work until better prices can be secured.

RED FOX WEIGHING 18 POUNDS KILLED AT HANOVER MARSH

When A. D. Jones, Footville, was duck hunting on the marsh near Hanover, he was searching among the reeds and grass for material to make a blind. He almost stepped on an animal which darted out of a grass thicket into the open. It was a red fox that was in the marsh either stalking a rabbit or waiting to pounce on a luckless mallard.

Jones had a running shot at the fox and scored a direct hit. The fox weighed 18 pounds. The fur is a fiery red, glossy and of thick texture. He was offered $25 for the pelt. The state pays a bounty for fox-but not the country.

"He looked as big as an elephant and as fast as an antelope when he broke for the open," stated Mr. Jones on Monday when he brought the fox to the court house.

All the feminine employees of the court house wanted the animal for a munt. The fur was in prime condition.

Suppose you had the settling of your neighbor's problem—

SUPPOSE it was Brown's case that was up for consideration. Brown is heading in a direction that has brought trouble to a lot of people—a direction known to be full of risks. Brown himself isn't going any too good. There are days when he hits the bumps harder than he can comfortably stand—and he shows it.

There's another road that Brown could travel safely—smooth, comfortable, pleasant, and absolutely safe.

And Brown came to you for advice. And you'd look at the facts and you'd say: "Why, Brown, there's nothing to this thing. It doesn't take any argument to decide this. Turn to the right and take the smooth, safe road, and Do It Now."

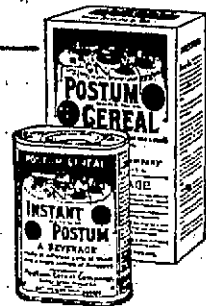

Suppose the road Brown is on is the coffee or tea road. Hundreds have had trouble on that road. Doctors have sounded the warning for the public, and raised the "no-traffic" sign for their patients—time and time again. The drugs, caffeine in coffee and then in tea, keep whipping the nerves—tending to interfere with sleep, upset digestion, produce high blood pressure, and to wear down health and efficiency by the disturbance of rest and nervous balance. Some folks go a long way on the road; some folks don't seem to notice the jolts—for a while, anyway.

But what would you say to Brown about choosing the safe road instead of the risky one?

And suppose Brown were you?

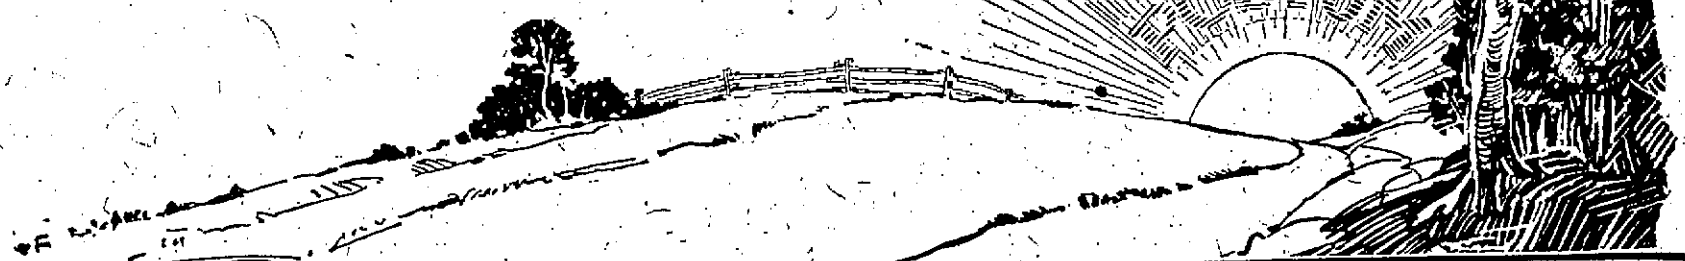

Postum users travel the sunrise road—away from the coffee and tea jolts and risks.

POSTUM comes in two forms: INSTANT POSTUM (in tins) made instantly in the cup by the addition of boiling water. POSTUM CEREAL (in packages of larger bulk, for those who prefer to make the drink while the meal is being prepared) made by boiling for 20 minutes. Sold by all grocers.

Dinner for the Football Team—At the George McKee mansion Monday evening a dinner was given to the 22 members of the Janesville football team, coaches, athletic leaders and members of the board of directors by Charles Muggleton. It was a dinner perfect in its appointments. The table was set for 40, decorated with chrysanthemums with tips of the flowers dyed blue and the place cards were decorated with gaudy pictures marked "J. H. S." and a poem looks like a football in miniature. In advance of Thanksgiving and showing that the turkey is not a great delicacy, as it is not extinct, a number of the birds were carved by the host and Mr. McKee. Following the menu came a number of talks under the direction of the leader, Superintendent Frank Holt, and the burden was the spirit that had been infused in the school by the football team. Coaches, members of the team and others spoke on the same lines with a few words from the host on the necessity of building character along with the spirit of the school.

During the dinner, the Rotary-Kiwanis quartet, Dr. Thos. Snodgrass, Edward Leary, Dr. Stewart Richards and David Drummond sang to an enthusiastic and cheering audience that demanded repeat encores.

Joe Steiner was director of the sports that followed and the McKee home was made into an athletic field with a football game and other sports, noise, cheers, song and a good time generally. George McKee bewildered his audience with his line of prestidigitations. With a flourish he drew from his pocket a football team and the 22 members of the football team, coaches, board of directors, Superintendent Frank Holt, Principal George Bassford, Superintendent of the Vocational school, James Decker, and others represented the school directing staff.

whole, with the hope that further general principles could be incorporated in the agreement reached Monday. In the main, the discussions are following the lines of the "10 points" suggested by China, whose delegates are confident that in the end, most of these points will have been translated into actual agreements on policy.

With the suggestions indicating point to an understanding rather than a treaty, as the form to be taken by the final Far Eastern agreement. Diplomatically, such an instrument would be passed along with the "gentlemen's agreement" of the past regarding China and would not require senate confirmation. There have been hints that the naval restriction might take that form, but that is one of the details still to be adjusted.

Cover Many Points. Comparison of China's bill of rights with the four principles adopted by the conference Monday discloses that the latter cover only two and a half of the "10 points" proper, and one paragraph of China's independence, sovereignty and territorial administration integrity of China, covers in almost identical words China's proposal under I-A. The resolution providing for the "open door" deals with the Chinese second point; that prohibiting special privileges is contained in the fourth Chinese point; and that which is designed to aid China in her internal affairs applies to the following paragraph in the preamble to the Chinese declaration: "It is necessary that she (China) should have every possible opportunity to develop her political institutions in accordance with the genius and needs of her own people."

Thus, are left for consideration of the conference: Point 2-B, China's undertaking not to lease territorial or national to any power; point 3, which prohibits treaty regarding the Chinese region without China becoming a party thereto; point 5, which treats more specifically with the political and administrative integrity of China, viz. extra territorial; point 6, providing for the interpretation of instruments granting special provisions in China in favor of the grantor; point 8, providing for China's rights as a neutral in the Pacific and the Far East; and point 10, providing for future conferences of the powers to determine the determination of common policies in relation to the Far East.

NAVAL EXPERTS REVIEW TECHNICAL QUESTIONS
An association of naval experts of the three major powers were reviewing Tuesday the highly technical questions arising in connection with the American proposals for immediate reduction of the fleet and a 10 year naval building holiday.

The British and Japanese officers appear to have found some details of the plan which will require treatment before the British and Japanese delegates. For one thing, the British have pointed out the effect on the fleet of the American program would have if the full measure of Secretary Hughes' plan were carried into execution. The plan proposes absolute cessation of building for 10 years; the fixing of the life of a battleship at 20 years, replacement of ships to begin 17 years after the ship to be replaced was completed, this allowing three years for construction of the new ship.

Rule 20 Year Idea. The 20 year rule alone is a novel one for other navies. Japan now uses eight years as the life of capital ships, beginning replacement within that period after a vessel is constructed. She has not as yet worked out this eight year cycle however, expecting with her present building program to attain it in 1928. The Japanese navy is the most modern in the world. For two years previous, four a year, this five new battleships a year, and for years previous, four a year. This program is what maintained her "two power standard," now abandoned. It did not contemplate a 20 year active life for the ships.

Applying the proposed American replacement rule to the ships to be retained by each power under the same program, Great Britain would have in 1931, at the end of the 10 year naval holiday when she might begin replacement, building, four to the time their keels were laid, four going back 21 years and four 20 years. Her newest battleships, the Royal Sovereign group of five, were laid down in 1911 and completed in 1914 under her pressure. They would be 15 years from date of completion and two years from the beginning of replacement vessels, when the holiday ended.

Case of Battle Cruisers. One of the four British battle cruisers to be retained, the Tiger, would be ready for replacement in 1931. The other three, the Hood, Renown and Repulse, were built and designed for action in the North Sea. Applying the 20 year life rule to the ships American proposes to keep, eight of the 18 would be 20 years or more from the date their keels were laid in 1911.

In the Japanese retained fleet, the oldest Japanese battleships, the Settsu, laid down in 1911, would have but three years of active life left when the holiday ended. Four other battleships, the Fusu, Yamashiro, Ise and Hingua, would have from four to five years to go before they were dropped as worn out and replaced. The Nagato alone would have a decade or more of serviceable life left and the four battle cruisers, the Kirishima, Takama, Ise and Kongō, would have only four or five years before they would be dropped from the lists and replaced.

See U. S. Advantage. Viewed in this way, there is some reason to believe that both the British and Japanese experts think the United States would come to the end of the holiday in far better shape than either of the two other powers. That appears to be the basis of the discussions now proceeding and perhaps of the Japanese desire to retain some of the newer ships scheduled for the scrap heap by the American plan, rather than discard them.

The situation apparently would weight more heavily on Japan than on Great Britain, because under the 5-5-3 ratio of Secretary Hughes' plan, already accepted by the British, the British would have to provide for a 20 per cent reduction of their fleet by 1931, when the ratio would apply while Japan must get to work promptly on new ships, if she was to maintain even the proposed "5-5-3" ratio.

It seems possible that Secretary Hughes' comparison still would reduce in tonnage than the "500,000-500,000-300,000" capital ships aggregates laid down in his replacement plan. He was stating the case for the United States with the possibility of an agreement on Far Eastern and Pacific questions in the background and he used this language: "With the acceptance of this plan, the burden of meeting the demands of competition in naval armament will be lifted. Enormous sums will be released to aid in the progress of civilization."

Would Keep Defense. "At the same time, the proper demands of national defense will be adequately met and the nations will have ample opportunity during the naval holiday of ten years to consider their future course."

There seems little reason to doubt that the American replacement program, to apply after the holiday, is largely tentative except in the "5-5-3" ratio principle. It was expected by the American delegates, without question, that a 10 year test of the practical results of other agreements reached as to the Far East would pave the way for still further naval reductions at the end of that time.

Take ARCOLA as a Gift—from your Heating Engineer

We mean it—a gift.
Your Heating Engineer will tell you that three average winters will pay back its cost to you in the fuel it saves.

And think of the satisfaction of having every room warmed by its own American Radiator—the same kind of radiators that warm the White House itself.

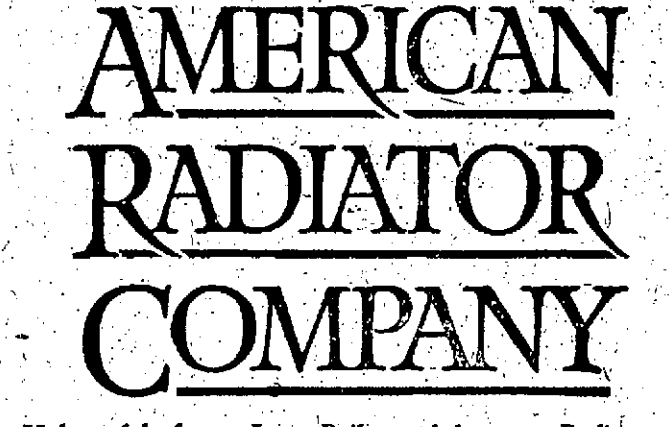

Think of the joy of having all the hot water you want for washing, or bathing, for ARCOLA can heat the kitchen tank, too, without subtracting from the warmth of the house.

Surely all this comfort is worth the little trouble of telephoning your Heating Engineer. He will gladly call and make an estimate. You will be surprised to learn how little ARCOLA costs and how quickly it can be installed.

Don't go through another winter bathing and dressing and eating in chilly rooms. Take a little comfort out of life—especially comfort that pays its own way. Take ARCOLA from your Heating Engineer—take it as his gift.

The red and yellow card at the right is the sign of a Heating or Sanitary Engineer (you used to call him Steamfitter or Plumber) who can show you ARCOLA. Look for it in his window.

It will pay you to consult him twice a year as you do your Doctor or Dentist. His report on your heating and plumbing costs little. It may save much.

AMERICANS TAKEN BY MEXICANS; RELEASED

Washington. — Four Americans were captured late Tuesday by Mexican bandits at Santa Tula, 22 miles from Chihuahua, the state department was advised Tuesday. After being held for ransom, the party was released at the end of a four hour period, when no ransom was forthcoming.

Those captured were Edgar Butts, a mining engineer of the American Smelting and Refining company, and his wife, William Banker, another employee, and Miss Mary, daughter of a former American consular agent at Parral.

Shortly after the Americans had been released, Oscar Trevino, a Mexican mine owner, was captured by the same bandits and released on payment of $5,000 ransom.

Advices from American agents in lower California indicate the revolt, in progress for two weeks, was virtually ended.

SEEK REMEDY FOR SLEEP SICKNESS

London.—An expedition formed by the Tropical Diseases Prevention association will leave soon to make the first organized attempt to investigate on the spot the treatment of sleeping sickness, as distinct from the question of the mere transmission or cause of the disease.

The expedition will be conducted by four parasitologists and two veterinary scientists and it is expected the work will occupy two and a half years. It is sought to carry out the work in different centers with the sanction and support of the governments interested, and it is hoped that

Danish Unemployment Steadily Increasing

Copenhagen. — Unemployment has been steadily increasing in Denmark since July. The unemployed now number 15,411. There is not much hope among business men that matters will alter for the better during the winter. The high cost of living and the tremendous German imports compel Danish industries to lie dormant and hope for better times.

"Good-night, George!"

No word of sympathy. He smiled at all, beyond a faint, half-smiling, half-bored hint from his mother, because he had run boldly against a fashion of thinking. Little more, really.

He softly closed the door of his room, the last time he would ever do so. He sat on the edge of the bed. He took Sylvia's photograph from his pocket and studied it with a deliberate lack of sentiment. He fancied her delectable lips, framing epithets of angry contempt and those other words to which he had given his own significance.

"You'll not forget!"

He looked so long, repeating it in his mind so often, that at last his eyes blurred, and the pictured lips seemed, indeed, to curve and straighten.

"You'll not forget!"

He tapped the photograph with his forefinger.

"You're going to help me remember," he muttered. "I'll not forget."

He placed the photograph and the black crop at the bottom of this oil-cloth suitcase. The rest of his packing was simple: he had so little that he was actually his own. There were a few books on a shelf, relics of his early attendance at the neighboring high school—he regretted now that his ambition there had been physical rather than mental. Ever in the department of his muscles, however, his brain had grown a good deal, for he was bright enough. If he made money he had better get ready for college by fall. He had always envied the boys who had drifted annually from the high school to the remote and exhilarating grandeur of a university.

What had old Planter's sequence been? Education, money, breeding. Of course, and he guessed that the three necessities led to an extent. The walk hand in hand. The acquisition of an education would mean personal contacts, helpful, financially, perhaps, perhaps, that culture that he felt was as essential as the rest. Certainly the starting place for him was a big university where a man, once in, could work his way through. Lambert went to Harvard, and there was the question of railroad fare and lost time. He'd better try his luck at Princeton, which wasn't far and which had, he'd heard, a splendid reputation for working its way through college.

He examined his bank book. Fortunately, since he had lived with his parents, he had little opportunity of spending money. The balance showed nearly five hundred dollars, and he would receive fifty more in the morning. If he could find something to bolster up his amount, say a few dollars more, he'd be in a position to go to it; he'd be fairly on his course.

He went to bed, but he slept restlessly. He wanted to be "elephant" again, and he wanted to see Sylvia. A certain mind pervaded his desire for a glimpse of Sylvia. If he could find something to bolster up his amount, say a few dollars more, he'd be in a position to go to it; he'd be fairly on his course.

"The Love Pendulum"

By MARION RUBINMAN

CHAPTER LXXI

It was always so much easier to follow than to lead, or to be my own way, that I did everything my aunt told me.

She was supremely happy now. She ran me entirely. I literally ate, slept and spent my whole time according to her directions. She was a woman of abundant energy, with not enough outlets for it. She had tried to manage my father, who quarreled, then married thinking he would escape her, then fairly fled to Europe to get away from her.

"Through which she married it changed things," he told me one afternoon. "She had one person always about to manage her rather than she. I liked it, I believe. He was too busy to think about anything else but his business, and was relieved to have all the rest of his life managed for him."

"But you always have your way when you want it," I observed.

"True," he answered. "And of course we never quarrel openly, that sort of thing is rather vulgar—but there's opposition running underneath everything."

"You seem to agree very well about how to manage me," I said dolefully.

My father laughed.

"Well you see, in this case I bow to my sister. I believe she knows better how to bring you up than I do. I've been negotiating as a parent. I admit. But I never felt like a parent. I like you more because you are a pretty woman than because you are my daughter."

I considered this, wondering whether I was a commodity or not. From my point of view, which was the domestic one, it was not; from his point of view, it was.

"What do you think, aunt Harriet has in mind about me?" I asked curiously.

My father stretched himself out in his chair, his feet on a low footstool toward the fire.

"Nothing, in particular, except to make you a great success. After all, it's that, and I'm sorry. After all, it's the only life you are fitted for. You have everything in you to make you a great social success, and you know yourself that when you tried to be quiet and domestic and obscure, you were miserable."

"I know," I said, and my tone must have sounded miserable.

"So you see, there's nothing in that. Better let Harriet manage things for a time. She's very clever. She's put you in the proper sort of house for the season—small, but as you are young and alone, you do not need an elaborate establishment."

"But, father, the rent of this place and a cook and assistant and a maid, and my car—"

"True, but why have money if you don't spend it?" Father always looked so bored at the mention of practical details that I did not pursue this subject.

He held out his cigarette case.

"I know you don't like them, but try these, they're mild. I have them made from a special tobacco grown in Egypt, and put up there just for me."

ANSWERED LETTERS

R. C.—You should weigh 120 pounds. A diet chart will be mailed to you if you send a stamped addressed envelope. A good skin is the result of good health, especially that of the digestive tract.

Princess—The lines you speak of are only temporary, due to the fact that you are 30 pounds overweight. A tablespoonful of olive oil, taken in the same amount of grape juice three times each day, will give you thin, rounded cheeks and also build up your general health.

A. L. D. A.—As you did not give me the ink of the box and ink, I cannot compute their respective weights.

U. V. B.—White spots on the neck come from poor circulation, which causes these little deposits of lime to collect. They will bleach off if you rub into them a paste made from equal parts of pitch and myrrh. These ingredients are blended by heating them slightly.

Brunette—A dermatologist will remove the pits from smallpox. Cocoa butter massaged gently into the tissues each night will nourish and flatten the blemish.

Helen—There is no space at this time to publish the cucumber formula. I will be glad to mail it to you, if you send a stamped addressed envelope.

Dea—A girl of 16, height five feet two inches should weigh about 110 pounds. To increase your weight, follow the advice given to Deby in this column.

Brunette—To remove these shafts from the hair, use a very fine toothed comb, which is kept wet with vinegar.

Heart and Home Problems

BY ELIZABETH THOMPSON, IN CARE OF THE GAZETTE.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I have been married nine years. Two years ago my husband and I broke up house-keeping and moved to the home of my parents so that I could take care of mother, who lost her capacity to keep house through a stroke. After I had been home a few months my husband had to give up his position because he was so afflicted with rheumatism. I can tell you that I was busy with my two invalids, but I was thankful to be of service to them.

too bad, but he was rather a charming chap.

I fairly gasped. My aunt was shocked, but while I was shocked, I was getting excited. And I did not mind helping her get rid of Gwyn.

No one could blame me.

Wednesday—HEART SICK

will keep house for himself. The worst of it is that he brings it up to us that we were very glad to make use of his house when it was to our advantage. This makes me very unhappy and I don't know what to do. I don't like to be ungrateful to my father because he has always been very good to me and a great comfort and help in my trouble.

What would you advise us to do?

TROUBLED DAUGHTER.

I would advise you to go with your husband to another state since an opportunity for work presents itself there. Since he offers your father a home, he is doing all that he should be expected to. Your father is making his own choice when he prefers to stay alone and keep house, and he should not call you ungrateful if you refuse to sacrifice your husband's advantage in order to humor him.

"Lonesome." Since you say that you do everything I tell a lonesome girl to try and are still lonesome, you must overlook some of your failings and direct your efforts in the wrong channels. I would suggest that you tell your school teacher what you have told me and ask her to give her honest opinion in regard to your personality and appearance and ask her to suggest ways to improve.

No, I would not advise you to invite the boy who has never spoken to you to your Christmas party. Invite a neighbor, a relative, or the one who has been the very nicest to you at school or church. Another way to get around your difficulty would be to have your teacher suggest a boy she thinks would like to go, but one who is invited unless you take him. You might invite him by means of a letter, or by going up to him when you see him.

"Bob." I was very glad to hear about your college life and your good times. It is only natural that you find yourself too busy to write many letters. It was a shame that Fred's uncle did not leave him money for college, but since he did not, Fred is showing the right spirit by saying so that he can attend college from his own efforts.

I am afraid you are too busy to get much from a course by mail. I would suggest, however, that you talk the matter over with the dean of your English professor.

out all the money I've paid you for wages, and the grub you've eaten besides.

"Yassah," agreed the darky. "I guess you is, white folks."

"Well, confound you," growled the growler. "You don't seem to be working your head any!"

"Lawdy," returned the darky. "Ain't a bit of use of me an' you both working 'bout the same thing is they?"

It happened the other day, down on the farm when inquiries were made as to the abilities of the new hired man:

"He's the kind of a fellow," replied Farmer Plumigette, "that when he's down is entirely unmanly by criticism."

Blues Lose Star Men--City League Resumes Wednesday

TEAM HOWEVER IS RICH IN MATERIAL FOR NEXT SEASON

Twelve of the regulars on the Jamesville high school team will graduate in February and June. That leaves only six men who were on the regular squad. However, the second string men are numerous and are developing into good players.

Those who graduate in February are Captain Granger, Lane and Kelly. In June the following are due to go out into the world: H. Casey, Schultz, Greenidge, Crapper, McCusker, Townsend, Stoldt, J. Casey and McDermott.

The men who will remain of the first team are Quarterback Knapp, Young, Conroy, R. Leary and Seeman. Knapp has two years to go, but has plans of leaving Jamesville but states he will remain until the Blues beat Detroit.

While there were hopes of booking a game for Thanksgiving, the faculty thought it better to let the matter go and call the season ended.
